

#3776 CENTURY Travia

A new brand : “#3776 CENTURY Travia”

Beyond the Tradition.

“Travia” is a coined name combining Tradition and Via (meaning “path” in Latin). Built on the heritage of writing culture shaped by those who came before us, “#3776 CENTURY Travia” represents an evolving road that extends straight into the future.

The Beginning of the Story - The #3776 Lineage

In 1978, Platinum Pen developed the “#3776” as the ideal fountain pen together with the late Haruo Umeda, a novelist and fountain-pen collector. Named after Mt. Fuji’s altitude—3,776 meters, the “#3776” was launched with a single ambition: to create Japan’s finest fountain pen.

In 2011, the “#3776 CENTURY” was introduced, featuring the groundbreaking Slip & Seal Mechanism to overcome one of the biggest problem of fountain pens—ink drying out. With enhanced reliability for everyday use and improved writing performance, “#3776 CENTURY” grew into one of Platinum’s iconic series.

Then, to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the “#3776 CENTURY,” the “#3776 CENTURY DECADE” was launched. It incorporated the gathered design—an icon of the “#3776” in 1978—into the body and adopted a flat-top silhouette.

“#3776 CENTURY DECADE” was also equipped with a newly developed nib, whose supple, flexible feel signaled another milestone in Platinum’s ongoing fountain-pen innovation.

Equipped with the new “FLAF” nib.

The journey to pursue the ideal fountain pen that began with “#3776” continues beyond “#3776 CENTURY.” “#3776 CENTURY Travia” now proudly features the newly engineered FLAF nib, highly acclaimed on the “#3776 CENTURY DECADE.” Its sharper, more acute tip delivers a new writing experience—supple and smooth as if gliding across the paper.

FLAF = Float Like A Feather

Named after the initials of “Float Like A Feather,” the FLAF nib delivers exactly what its name suggests: a writing feel like a feather floating over the paper.

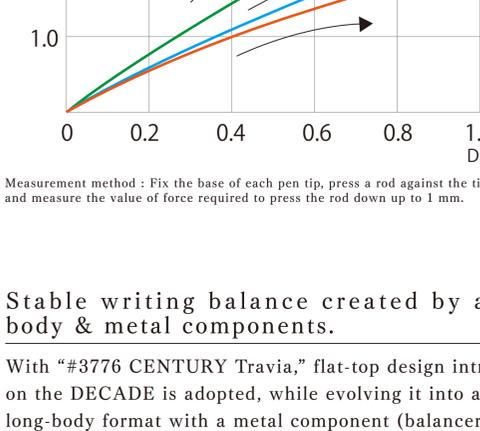

At the same time, it offers precise control to express even the finest nuances with lines exactly as you intend. From the very first stroke to stops, clicks, and sweeps, the FLAF nib responds to the writer’s sensibility—achieving a delicate, expressive touch in character.

FLAF Nib Features

When we evaluate and compare the nib’s flex response, the chart below shows that the FLAF nib delivers a softer flex than the current #3776 CENTURY “F.”

(In other words, the FLAF nib flexes with less force than the current nib.)

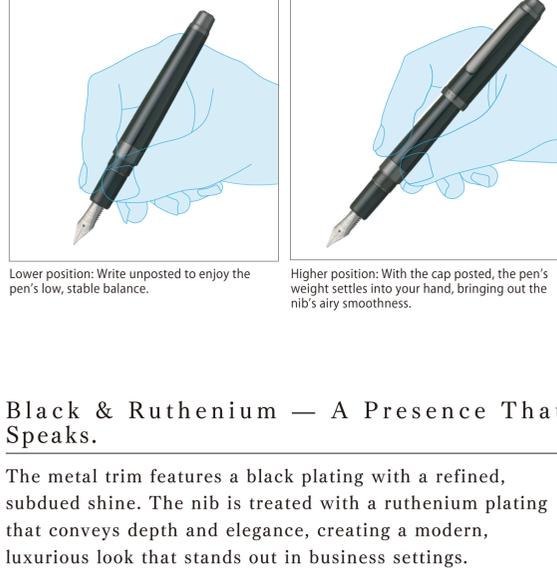

In addition, while the #3776 CENTURY “F” and “SF” used for comparison show a bow-shaped curve characteristic, the FLAF nib shows a more linear curve response—flexing in direct proportion to the force applied. This means the line changes as intended with writing pressure, making the FLAF nib easier to control and fine-tune in feel.

Measurement method : Fix the base of each pen tip, press a rod against the tip gradually, and measure the value of force required to press the rod down up to 1 mm.

Stable writing balance created by a long body & metal components.

With “#3776 CENTURY Travia,” flat-top design introduced on the DECADE is adopted, while evolving it into a long-body format with a metal component (balancer) integrated at the center of the barrel. In addition, the grip section also incorporates metal, bringing the center of gravity closer to the fingertips and maintaining a stable balance even during extended writing sessions. Whether writing fine characters or bold strokes, the pen is engineered to respond exactly as intended. From the moment you hold it, you can feel its defining qualities: a natural, secure fit in the hand and a reassuring sense of weight.

Black & Ruthenium — A Presence That Speaks.

The metal trim features a black plating with a refined, subdued shine. The nib is treated with a ruthenium plating that conveys depth and elegance, creating a modern, luxurious look that stands out in business settings.

By your planner, on your desk, or in a breast pocket—wherever it is placed, it quietly speaks of the owner’s discerning taste.

First batch limited to 2,000 sets: Special package with a booklet “Ah, Fifty Years of Hardship.”

“Ah, Fifty Years of Hardship” is a chronicle of Platinum Pen’s history, written by our founder, Shunichi Nakata, himself. “#3776 CENTURY Travia” is a new fountain pen designed to open the way to the future. By bringing these two together, we present them as a single story—one that flows from the past to the present, and onward to an unseen “new page” yet to be written.

To let you hold in your hands both the weight of our accumulated history and the rising excitement of the challenges ahead, we have prepared a special package, limited to 2,000 sets in the first production batch.

We have revised “Ah, Fifty Years of Hardship,” first published in 1966, and prepared an English edition so that readers overseas can enjoy it as well.
